Chapter 1 by Margaret Zhou

When all of us are born, we are given a pendant. It is either silver or red, there is no in-between. We are told when we are children, that the pendant is the key to our fate. That one day when the pendant starts to glow, then you will have to find your fated one. The stronger it glows, the closer you are. Only when the pendant turns black are you given a new life.

Chapter 2 by Margaret Zhou

I never wanted to be here.

"Today we will be setting off into the European Republic. We are in a quest to help you select number of people find their fated one."

I don't want my destiny chosen for me. I don't want to be on this ship and I certainly don't want some guy I've never met to suddenly be my spouse.

My name is Astrid Reynolds and I am fifteen years old. In all the books the teenagers are always the strongest force. We are unstoppable and we can do anything. That is just a fantasy in my world and we are weak and frail. My parents made me take the entrance exam for this ship and I really wish they didn't. I would rather have to find some random guy.

My pendant has always been silver and it doesn't look good against my skin tone. I hate everything about it and I want to leave.

Chapter 3 by Smurffi_IX

But it is impossible to leave. They can track you to your pendant, and throwing away your pendant, that is unthinkable. Your pendant is what you are, lose it and you lose you. There have been a few who have lost their pendants. They have been publicly ashamed and exiled from the commonwealth. The governments of the world don't recognize them anymore. If you have lost your pendant you are dead to the world, and tomorrow I will commit suicide.
